Stephen of Hungary Crowned
The "apostle of Hungary" receives his crown from the pope

Between Kievan Rus and the emerging attonian kingdom of Germany stood forests and grasslands, peopled by nomads who were of various Slavic and Pristic ancestry. The region lay for centuries scarcely touched by urban growth & uncivilized by politics, law or the church. Perhaps because of its distance from the Germans to the west.

Vikings to the north, the tribes who roamed these lands east of the Elbe began to form Communities; by 1000 the MAGYARS of Hungary, the Bohemians and the Poles had each become united under a single ruler.

Bohemia's 1st King St. WENCESLAUS (~907-29) was reared in the faith. Rulers of Poland & Hungary followed. Boleslav, the Mighty, Duke of Poland (~992-1025) established the Polish national church and, with the aid of Emperor Otto III, succeeded in freeing it from German supervision.

In 1000, GNEIZNO became the 1st Capital & was made a metropolitan See. Just before his death in 1025, Boleslav was crowned 1st King of Poland, the most powerful kingdom in eastern Europe, with Russia as a vassal state. In Hungary, 1001, Stephen, Duke of Hungary was crowned by Sylvester II, as an act symbolic of birth of national states in eastern Europe.
